No.35 Bog Cotton, Oil on Canvas, 18x24in

Thelma has always loved the sea and seashore, especially shrimping, rock-pooling and shell collecting. She also has had a long and happy relationship with Connemara bogs regularly walking there with hawks and dogs.

She describes the location of her Spiddal studio as Paradise. It overlooks the little harbour, the river estuary, Galway Bay to the Burren and out west to the Aran Islands.

She revels in painting the landscape in all its moods and especially enjoys the comings and goings of Hookers and Currachs.

This exhibition shows Thelma's unique ability to capture mood and atmosphere and the extraordinary nature of the "Atlantic Light".

THELMA MANSFIELD

Thelma Mansfield has been interested in art since her very young days. Her extraordinary talent was recognized early on when she was given the highest accolade in the Texaco Childrens Art Competition. On three occasions she won the top award in the Glen Abbey Art Competition, which was judged by the late James White.

She went to work in RTÉ while still in her teens, but she always kept up with her drawing and painting. When she retired from broadcasting in the late nineties, Thelma was free to devote all of her time to art.

This is Thelma's second solo exhibition in The Kenny Gallery.
