FARRELL & FARRELL

NEW GALWAY PASTELS
BY PATSY FARRELL

COPPER SCULPTURE
BY GAY FARRELL

19 OCTOBER - 19 NOVEMBER, THE KENNY GALLERY, GALWAY

---

Patsy Farrell and Gay Farrell, native Galwegians and brothers, are self-taught artists who began their journey by experimenting with wood and metal. They turned their craftsmanship into art, each developing a unique style. Their partnership in a garage business and shared love for creating have led to extraordinary works, including a notable larger-than-life sculpture of Jack Charlton made from used oil drums. Patsy started as a wood carver, influenced by Larry O'Kelly, but found his passion in painting, particularly with pastels. His work focuses on the changing landscapes of Cappagh and the inspiration he draws from Connemara and the streets of Galway. Patsy's art captures the familiar in a fresh, vibrant way, reflecting his joy and fulfilment.

Gay, a welder by trade, transformed his skills into an art form by using his welding machine like a paintbrush. His sculptures are characterized by their simplicity and fluidity, resulting from his spontaneous creativity. Gay's ability to draw in space with controlled precision brings a unique, uncluttered elegance to his work.

From October 19 to November 19, explore the distinct yet complementary styles of Patsy and Gay Farrell. Their new paintings and sculptures offer a captivating blend of personal expression and shared artistic vision.

Join us for the official opening on Saturday, 19th October at 3:30pm, where you'll have the opportunity to meet the artists and explore their latest work. The exhibition will be officially opened by renowned sculptor John Behan, and continues until 19th November at The Kenny Gallery, Liosbán, Galway City.

Opening hours from 9:00 to 17:00, Monday to Saturday, and all works are available to buy.
